Almost half of the entire congregation of a leading colored church being arrested is the novel situation here, and comes about through friction within the church fiself, and after an all-night service. Being unable to dispossess the minister and his follower through legal means, lust night about two-score of the congregation took possession of the church and held an opposition service. Two distinct services then proceeded, and for all night there was no fighting, but the feeling was intense. Finally the preacher and his followers invoked the aid, of the law, having the beliggerents arrested for a nulsance.

performed not only a high order of useful work in his department at the University, but has, possibly, as exensively as any man in the State not n political life, impressed his personality upon the people of the State at arge. During this time Dr. Hume has consistently and unselfishing labored onsistently and unselfishly labored lowards inspiring in the people generally a love of the English language and the ambition for a more intimate acquaintance with the masters of English literature and their work. To his endeavors he has brought a deep and ever-ripening learning, combined with an ever-young enthusiasm and it would be impossible to estimate the It would be impossible to estimate the circle in which his influence has been feit. He has had through it all the typical scholar's indifference to return and eagerases in pursuit. When, after worthy labors, the time has come when further activity should be a pleasure instead of a necessity, the Carnegle endowment finds in his case its ideal operation.

diss Fannie Elizabeth Dillard Becomes Bride of Dr. Oswald Stuart McCown.

MRS. STACY MATRON OF HONOR

Richmond Lady and Husband, Mr. Frank Eugene Stacy, Are Members of Bridal Party.

LYNCHBURG, VA., February 5.—One of the most brilliant marriages which has taken place in this city recently, was that to-night at 9 o'clock, of Miss Fannie Elizabeth Dillard, the charming daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John w. Dillard, to Dr. Oswald Ftuart McCown, a leading physician of Memphis, Tenn. The well-appointed residence of the bride's parents, No. 809 Church Street, was superbly decorated for the occasion, and was thronged with the many friends who had been invited to witness the pleasing event.

In the large parior in which the ceremony took place, an altar had been improvised with flowers and palms, and here the impressive service of the Episcopal Church was recited by Rev. J. M. Owens, rector of St. Paul's Church. ing daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John w

Dr. and Mrs. McCown will leave on a late train to-night for a tour in the South, after which they will make their future home in Memphis, where the bride will receive a cordial welcome, having previously paid' a visit there to Miss Townes in the fall of 1905.

The bride will be greatly missed in Lynchburg, where she is universally very popular. Possessed of a bright and charming personality, to which has been added the pleasing finish imparted by the best schools, she hus relgraed in society circles as a leader, and is greatly admired and beloved. Memphis is indeed fortunate in gaining such a talented and fortunate in gaining such a talented and gracious daughter of the Old Dominion.

The presents were varied, valuable and handsome, embracing many articles of hand-painted china, silver, cut-glass, brie-a-brac, etc.

The bride, who has passed most of her life in Richmond, where she has many relatives and friends, is a very lovable, pretty and attractive young lady. On beth the paternal and maternal branches of her family she is descended from ancestors of Revolutionary service and fame. Her father was the late Captain William Trucheart Mosby, of Richmond, a sen of the late John Alexander Mosby, and grandson & Colonel William Trucheart, of Hanover, a soldler of the Revolution. Her mother, who before her marriage, was Miss Victoria Peters, of Cumberland county, is a niece of the late Colonel William E. Peters, of the University of Virginia, and great-granddaughter of John Jackson, who served in the Revolutionary army, and whose wife in consequence, received a pension until her death.

The groom, who is a young gentleman of culture and literary attainments of a high order, being at one time connected with a leading daily of New York, is the son of Mr. Arthur Dickenson Thompson, a member of one of the leading families of Savannah, Ga. He is now State manager of the Elliott and Fisher Typewriter Company, with headquarters at Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson left on the cast-bound afternoon train for a visit North before proceeding to their home in Richmond.

The only guests of the occasion from other points were Misses Elizabeth Carrington Brock and Annie Beaufort Brock and Salle J. Peters, all of Richmond, cousins of the bride.
